

Connotation - Study Guide

Recognize the feelings and associations a word carries beyond its literal definition.

Learning goal

Distinguish literal meaning from positive, negative, or neutral associations and analyze how loaded wording changes a sentence.

What this skill really means

Two words can point to nearly the same thing but create different impressions. "Confident" and "arrogant" both describe strong self-belief, but their connotations are very different.

Connotation matters because authors use word choice to position people, ideas, places, or events in a particular emotional or evaluative light.

Word	Basic idea	Typical connotation
slim	thin	often positive or neutral
skinny	thin	often negative
persistent	keeps trying	often positive
stubborn	will not change	often negative

How exam-style questions ask it

- What does the word ___ suggest about the speaker's attitude?
- Which word has the most negative connotation in the sentence?
- How would replacing ___ with ___ change the effect of the sentence?

A reliable method

1. Identify the literal idea first.
2. Notice whether the word adds approval, criticism, warmth, distance, urgency, or another association.
3. Read the surrounding description to see whether that association fits.
4. For replacement questions, compare what changes emotionally while keeping the factual meaning separate.

Tips and shortcuts

- Ask: If a news reporter wanted to sound neutral, would this be the word they chose?
- Do not confuse connotation with intensity. A stronger word can also change emotion, but the two are not identical.
- When two options are close, choose the one supported by several cues, not by one isolated word.

Worked examples

Example 1

The editorial called the abandoned lot a scar in the center of the neighborhood.

1. What does scar suggest about the writer's view of the lot?

- A. It is a harmless open space.
- B. It is an unattractive sign of damage.
- C. It is historically valuable.
- D. It is difficult to locate.

Answer: B

Scar carries a negative association with lasting damage, so it presents the lot as something that harms the area.

Example 2

A report says volunteers streamed into the shelter after the storm.

2. If streamed were replaced with arrived, what would change most?

- A. The number of volunteers would become exact.
- B. The sentence would sound less vivid and less suggestive of continuous movement.
- C. The volunteers would seem unwilling.
- D. The storm would seem stronger.

Answer: B

Arrived is more neutral. Streamed suggests a steady flow and creates a more vivid impression.

Common traps

- Giving only the dictionary definition.
- Assigning an emotion that the rest of the passage does not support.

- Assuming a replacement changes the facts when it mainly changes attitude.
- Choosing the opposite connotation because the words have similar literal meanings.

Self-check rule

Before accepting an answer, point to the exact word, phrase, or surrounding detail that proves your interpretation. If you cannot point to evidence, recheck the choice.

Quick check

1. Which sounds more approving: economical or cheap? Explain.
2. What connotation does clung to the old plan create that kept the old plan does not?
3. Write one neutral replacement for a strongly loaded word you know.

Quick check guidance

Say your answer in plain language and explain which exact wording in the sentence or passage supports it. The goal is evidence-based interpretation, not memorizing labels.
